The Scientist: Omnibus (Parts 1-4) Ryan Michael

Earth is ruled by a ruthless board of machines who live by the unquestioned law of the 'Records'. And man, through his own conceit, is long extinct.

The Scientist is a brilliant machine who figures out how to recreate mankind using preserved DNA. Now the human race may walk the Earth again. But will the all controlling board allow mankind to survive? The Scientist finds himself in a race to recreate the very species that created him. Now the hope of mankind rests on the algorithm of one rogue machine.

The Scientist is a smart novel full of fast-paced action, mind bending science, and intriguing concepts which question the nature of our existence. Readers will be contemplating The Scientist long after they've read the final page.
